Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Monday 04 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Cold, breezy with showers, frequent in parts of the east.

Today:
Freezing fog patches will be slow to clear in northern Scotland, whilst many northern and western parts will be mostly dry with some sunshine. Eastern and southern areas, cold, cloudier and windy with showers, wintry over some hills.

Tonight:
Showers in eastern and some central parts, frequent and heavy at times in the south-east, falling as snow over hills. Frost and ice inland with freezing fog patches in north.

Tuesday:
Cold with further showers, some wintry over hills, in central and eastern parts, prolonged in the south-east. Drier further west with some sunshine.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Wintry showers in the east Wednesday, rain and snow in the north-west later. Outbreaks of rain, sleet and snow moving southwards on Thursday. Wintry showers in the east on Friday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.